

Exciting story about two English women who lived in different eras, but both of them lived almost the same experiences, they felt similar emotions, and they lived and visited the same places, but with different endings for each other.

The story takes place in India in separated decades (one in 1920 and the other one in 1970).

Power, religion, love and dust, lots of dust.