READING

Small items, big meaning

People think that small items aren't very important. They want big houses and expensive cars. However, the truth is that small items often have more meaning than large ones.

This is my mother's favorite book. It's a gift from her. Now, I read at night and think of my family.

This is my grandfather's pen. It's very old. I write with it every day. I write letters to my friends and to my two sisters. I think about my grandfather's life, and his job as an author.

This is a game, chess, that my brother and I play together. It's a simple game with 16 black pieces and 16 white pieces. We're from Saudi Arabia, but now my brother lives far away, in Russia. He visits me for my birthday, on June 30, and we play chess together. It keeps us close.

This is a picture of me and my friend Kwang. She's from Thailand. In the picture, we are happy and smiling in Hong Kong. I think it's a beautiful picture, and I feel happy when I see it.

These three items have a lot of meaning for me. What items are important to you?
