TEACHING MUSIC TO YOUNG PEOPLE

I´ m walking in the middle of Johannesburg, South Africa. All around me, people are playing music on their radios and MP3 players. Trumpet and saxophone players are playing jazz, and there´s reggae and hip-hop in every street. People are dancing to kwela-traditional African dance music.

There´s a music school in one of these streets. This school is the home of a young orchestra, the Soweto Strings. There are about 100 musicians here ,aged 5 to 29.Students learn to play string instruments- violin ,cello and double bass, as well as piano .They play classical music and they also play African music. The classes are for local students and they are free.

Every year thousand of students want to have lessons here, but it´s impossible to teach everyone. The senior students teach the younger ones because there are only twelve teachers.

1.What kinds of music does the writer hear in the streets?

2.What is kwela?

3.What kinds of music does the Soweto Strings Orchestra play?

4.Who are the classes for?

5.Why do the senior students teach the younger children?
