

The macabre diary

It was the first day of Mara in the library of town. The school sent her there to improve the mark in literature. The librarian tried to keep her far, he gave the place where she can take books and saying her where she has forbidden to enter.

But Mara didn't want to obey him everything that the librarian said to her, she took as a challenge. Mara was taking a book of the "forbidden sections", she took them to her house, she read some pages and threw them to a corner of her bedroom with boredom and she didn't understand why the librarian didn't want her to touch them.

One of the books that she caught without permission, the book looked different, it was covered of a skin smooth, slim and gentle that made you want to caress it, it didn't have title, editorial and no illustration in the cover page. Mara opened it and started feel her feet and then her body cool, since she was reading a book where macabre stories of a strange person were told.

As she read more pages, the stories turned worse, she was totally scared, but didn't want to stop reading.

With each page her mind was shocked, because in each one of the stories was told a terrible assassination. She didn't have time to read them all, so skipped some and read the last story, but this was worse that the first, as if the person who had written it had grown his evil.

The next day, she went to deliver the diary in the hands of the librarian, saying him that she had disobeyed him and that she apologized to him; the librarian smiled and he said to her: Don't worry. With this attitude, the only thing that you get is that I talk about you in my diary.

After that happened, nobody knew again from Mara.

1- Why did Mara decide to visit the library?

2- What did the librarian mean when he said that he would speak about Mara in the diary?

3- How much did you like the story? Give a mark from 1 to 5 (1 is the minimum and 5 the maximum)
